Russia shows signs of a "come back."

Stanley and James spoke to 10,000 howling Democrats at Maysville Saturday.

New York, Pennsylvania and Massachusetts will vote on female suffrage Tuesday.

A team of four mules will pull Stanley's carriage in Louisville October 30, at the closing rally.

The Italians have entrenched themselves on Austrian soil and have started some real fighting.

The British submarine campaign against German shipping in the Baltic is being carried on actively. The sinking of four more German steamships is reported.

Six German lieutenants interned at Norfolk escaped in a small boat Oct. 10, which has since been abandoned at sea. What became of them is a matter of speculation.

Only four States elect Governors next Tuesday—Kentucky, Maryland, Mississippi and Massachusetts. In these and New Jersey, Ohio and Pennsylvania Legislatures will be chosen.

A committee of 19 Texans will go to Washington to make an appeal to the President in person for relief from the incursions of Mexican bandits. They want permission to pursue them into Mexico.

The week opens with the Russians aggressive all along their 675-mile battle-front. From a Baltic port they have flanked Von Bulow's army that has been attacking Riga, springing a complete surprise.

The speed devil scored heavily Sunday. At Detroit a whole family of eight members was wiped out when an automobile was hit by a train. At Wickford, R. I., three were killed and three injured when a car skidded and struck a tree.

Harry McChesney will speak here Thursday night and those who go to hear him—and everybody ought to go—will be entertained by one of the best stump speakers in Kentucky. Like the true Democrat he is, Harry is fighting for the party, although he failed to be nominated for Governor.

Five thousand voters of Breathitt and adjoining counties Friday gathered in Jackson to welcome and hear the address of A. O. Stanley, Democratic nominee for Governor. This is said to have been the biggest crowd ever gathered to hear a candidate for office in the mountain section. More than 1,000 men formed a parade to meet the standard-bearer, while the streets of the city were lined.

Referring to Tom Underwood's disability, George Weathers, of the Elkton Times, pays him this tribute: "An ornament to his profession, true and loyal to his friends as he is to every cause that tends to the betterment of his country, his city and his State, big-brained and big-hearted, Tom Underwood's pen, for which there can be no substitute, will be sadly missed during his absence. Heaven hasten his speedy recovery, for the sake of those near and dear to him by ties of blood, and likewise for the sake of those who, having tested his loyalty and devotion, are proud to call him 'friend' and grapple him to their hearts 'with hoops of steel.'"

Dan King Killed.

Dan King, one of the most prominent farmers in Logan county, was shot and killed by John Murphy near Adairville about noon Thursday. Two shots were fired, each entering the head directly above the left eye. The men were alone and met in the road.

King was one of the most prominent citizens in South Logan county. He was a great political worker. The trouble is thought to have arisen over a suit in local court last week, in which Murphy was suing King for part of a crop. The trial resulted in a hung jury and was to have come up again Friday.

NEW BETHEL DORMITORY

Will Be Discussed at a Meeting of the Trustees Friday Night at College.

SCHOOL NOW OVERFLOWING

Largest Attendance In Boarding Department For Many Years.

Two additional boarding pupils were enrolled at Bethel Female College yesterday and several others are expected to matriculate next week. President Peterson is greatly pleased with the outlook for the next session beginning in January, quite a number of pupils having already signed for rooms then, who were unable to attend this fall. The school now has the largest number of boarding pupils it has had in 20 years, the building being so crowded that the President's family has moved into a residence near the college to make more room.

The Board of Trustees have started the movement anew for a new dormitory. Plans have been made for a wing on the west side with rooms for 40 or 50 more girls and a meeting of the Board will be held at the College next Friday night at 7:30 o'clock. The trustees are Rev. C. M. Thompson, W. T. Tandy, Dr. T. W. Blakey, M. C. Forbes, Chas. M. Meacham, G. H. Stowe, C. W. Garrett, R. Y. Pendleton and Bailey Waller.

A few years ago the matter of building a dormitory reached a point where about $10,000 was subscribed and the present plan is to make this fund the basis of a new canvass for the building to be put up.

FIRE AT PEMBROKE

Residence and Contents Destroyed at An Early Hour Sunday Morning.

The residence of Mr. Thomas Watts at Pembroke, was destroyed by fire about 4 o'clock Sunday morning, together with most of its contents. The flames were caused by a defective flue. The loss is probably $2,000, with $1,500 insurance.

Owensboro Won.

Owensboro triumphed over the Orange and the Black on Mercer Field Saturday by the overwhelming score of 39 to 0. Two recovered fumbles and three intercepted forward passes, aided by a hard earned touchdown through line bucking gave the visitors their total. The game, despite the uneven score, was hard fought and full of thrills. The locals played a plucky and steady game for the first half that made the large crowd anticipate a tie score.

The superiority and experience of Owensboro became evident in the second half, and bereft the Orange supporters of hope.

Tanner starred for Owensboro, in a wonderful offensive game. Brown was in Hopkinsville's stellar role both in offense and defense, seconded by Moseley.

McChesney will be escorted to Hotel Latham and at 7:30 will speak at the Tabernacle at a Democratic rally, to close the local campaign. This is expected to be a big gathering and some fine speeches will be made.

HUNTING FOR TRACHOMA

Health Officers Inspecting The City Public Schools.

FEW CASES ARE FOUND

Will Be In Hopkinsville To-day and Finish Their Examination.

Dr. A. T. Cormack, of the state board of Health, and Dr. Jno. McMullen, of the National Health Service, yesterday began in inspection of school children in the city for trachoma, a disease of the eyes. In nearly every school there one found cases of red sore eyes, which is not only contagious but becomes chronic.

The two inspectors here found only a few cases and some of them were given treatment yesterday.

They not only examined the people but gave lectures warning them against the spread of the disease. It is not only painful, but sometimes leads to blindness. In Owensboro 215 cases were found and in Henderson 107.

OTHER NEGROES ARRESTED

Five Now Held in Jail as Suspects in Case of Assault.

George Hardy and the wife of Frank Rives, both colored, have been arrested and placed in jail, as suspects in the case of Luke Bagby, the Noah's Spring merchant who was recently assaulted and robbed. The Rives woman's husband was placed in jail several days ago. This makes five negroes under arrest as suspects in connection with the case.

Mr. Bagby, the victim of the assault, has regained his mental faculties to a great extent and he is now expected to recover from his injuries.

CAESARIAN OPERATION

Ushers Into The World Little Daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. W. Guthrie.

The Caesarian operation, so called from having been the surgical method by which Caesar was brought into the world, was performed in this city last Friday at the birth of a daughter to Mr. and Mrs. Lucian W. Guthrie, 401 West Fifteenth street. This is the first time such an operation has been performed in this city.

Mr. Guthrie is a letter carrier. His wife was formerly Miss Mira Wood and this is their first child. The little girl weighed eight pounds and mother and child are both doing nicely. They are at the Jennie Stuart Hospital, where the operation was performed.

FIND MUCH TRACHOMA

Eighty-one Pupils In Henderson Schools Have Disease ---Parents Aroused.

Henderson, Ky., Oct. 22.—This city has been stirred over the announcement of Drs. John McMullen, of the United States Public Health Service, and J. N. McCormack, of the State Board of Health, that eighty-one pupils of the city schools are afflicted with trachoma. Both physicians have just completed a thorough inspection of the city pupils. All the cases were found among the white pupils. Colored pupils will be inspected later.

HAMLETT'S SPEECH.

Hon. Barksdale Hamlett addressed a good crowd at the Court House Saturday afternoon in the interest of the Democratic ticket. His speech was substantially the same as was published in full in this paper a few days ago.

THE SERBIANS OVERPOWERED

Bulgarians Place Themselves Across Proposed Route of the Armies of the Allies.

SUCCESS WITH BIG LOSSES

French Troops Fight Side by Side With Serbs---German Cruiser Sunk.

London, Oct. 25.—The Bulgarians announce they have reached Uskup, an important junction on the Saloniki-Nish railway, thus placing themselves across the route by which the allies' reinforcements for the Serbs would travel. The Austro Germans in the north have begun a more vigorous offensive and have crossed the Danube near Orsova. This brings much nearer the linking up of the armies of the Germanic allies, and those of Bulgaria and the opening of the way through Bulgaria to Constantinople.

Success is not being achieved without heavy losses, as the Serbian veterans, well entrenched in their mountains, are offering stubborn resistance, and are making the invaders pay a big price for every mile of country invaded.

French troops are fighting beside the Serbs in the southeastern region, and reports from Athens say that other steps are being taken by the allies to help their small partner. Additional troops are being landed at Saloniki; Bulgarian ports in the Aegean and Black sea are being bombarded, and it is believed that men and munitions will be sent to Serbia by still another route. Without the active co-operation of Greece and Rumania, however, the allies, it is feared, cannot do much for some weeks.

LANDING OF RUSSIANS.

Russian troops landed at Domene, Courland, according to Berlin, have re-embarked. If that is so, it is probable the landing was intended as a diversion, in the hope of drawing German troops from the Riga and Dvink regions, where very heavy fighting is still in progress.

Except for a few attacks by the Germans, fighting in the west has consisted for the most part of artillery engagements and some exciting air contests.

A British submarine operating near Libau attacked and sunk a German cruiser of the Prince Adolbert class, according to official announcement.

SUSPICIOUS MOVEMENTS

That Indicate Some New Plans In The Caribbean Sea.

A tangled skein of circumstances, pointing either to the institution of a new commerce raiding campaign by Germans in the Caribbean Sea, or the beginning of a series of filibustering expeditions against Mexico, is perplexing officials at Washington, and also British officials, who fear a campaign against tank vessels carrying oil to England. Departure of seagoing motorboats, escape of six German officers interned at Norfolk and the mysterious movements of American yachts in the Gulf of Mexico are links in the puzzle chain. British vessels are keeping a sharp lookout for small vessels that may have been bought and armed for use by Germany.

Dr. Whiting Preached.

Dr. J. G. Whiting, who is here in the interest of the Redpath Lyceum, filled Dr. Thompson's pulpit at the First Baptist church Sunday morning, preaching a very able discourse on "The Lowly Nazarene." Dr. Whiting is a Baptist minister of much ability and is a pleasing speaker. He was heard by a large audience.

QUICK CHANGES OF LEVEL

Lake in Eastern Washington That Causes Trouble to the Residents
Along Its Borders.

A subscriber who was interested in the Companion's account of a lake in Italy that rises and falls in a singular and unexplained way has sent us some equally strange facts about a lake in eastern Washington. The town of Kahlots is built on the shores of the lake, and since it was once nearly submerged by one of the lake's sudden changes in level, a dike ten or twelve feet high has been built to protect the houses against another catastrophe.

The lake is normally a quarter of a mile wide and a mile and a half long, but at times the water falls so far that the lake is hardly 150 yards wide. The fall is always sudden, and so is the rise that eventually follows. Only one small stream enters the lake, and there is no visible outlet, but the water is always fresh.
When the railway was built through Kahlots the workmen tried to carry the tracks across the lake on an enbankment, but the sand was swallowed up almost as fast as it was poured in. A ditch was then dug to carry off the water through a tunnel into a nearby canyon. Half way through the tunnel the water found a crevice and disappeared into the earth. Where it comes to the surface again no one knows.

Our correspondent adds that on a ranch near the town of Kahlots there is a deep well, the water of which at intervals of about two weeks rushes up geyserlike to a height of several feet above the ground.—Youth's Companion.

WHY SHE ASKED

"How much are your brooms today, mister?"
"Brooms? Brooms? Why, lady, we don't sell brooms at this counter."
"Then what's that sign 'Sweeping Reductions' doing up there? I thought you were selling brooms cheaper than usual."

TROLLEY CAR STYLE.

"Conductor, I want to get off at Lafayette street."
"What street is that?"
"L-a-f-a-y-e-t-t-e."
"I called that street about ten blocks back."
"The deuce you did!"
"Yes, sir. I yelled 'Laf-yet' as loud as I could."

THE CAUSES.

"What do you suppose causes the rise in breadstuffs?"
"Sometimes it is strikes, sometimes the failure of the wheat crop, sometimes speculation, and often it is just plain yeast."

She Was Smothering.

Rockford, Ala.—Mrs. M. C. Paschal, of this place, says: "I was taken with nervous prostration, and had headache, back-ache, pains in my right side, and smothering spells. I called in physicians to treat my case, but without relief. Finally, I tried Cardui, and it gave perfect satisfaction. I recommend it to every sick woman." Are you weak, tired, worn-out? Do you suffer from any of the pains peculiar to weak women? Cardui has a record of over 50 in relieving such troubles, and will certainly benefit you. It prevents those frequent headaches, and

What Are Children?

What are children? . . . Flowers! They are flowers of the invisible world; indestructible, self-perpetuating flowers, each with a multitude of angels and evil spirits underneath its leaves, toiling and wrestling for dominion over it. Blossoms! They are the blossoms of another world, whose fruitage is angels and archangels. Or dewdrops! They are dew-drops that have their source, not in the chambers of the earth, nor among the vapors of the sky, which the next breath of wind or the next flash of sunshine may dry up forever, but among the everlasting fountains and inexhaustible reservoirs of mercy and love.—John Neal.

ST. PETER THE FIRST POPE

Traditions of the Roman Catholic Church So Record—Title Once
Given to All Bishops.

According to the tradition of the Roman Catholic church, St. Peter was the founder of the church and its first pope. Both the ecclesiastical and the temporal authority formerly exercised and still claimed by the popes of Rome are held to be of divine appointment, and to have been handed down in unbroken continuity from apostolic times to the present age. Peter the apostle, it is asserted was indicated by Christ himself as superior to the rest of the twelve in the faith and spiritual discernment, and as the one of the number whom it was his design to invest with special pre-eminence. In conformity with the design, Peter, accompanied by Paul, is said to have gone to Rome after Christ's death, and founded a church, over which he presided as its bishop for 25 years—from 41 A. D. to 67 A. D.—eventually suffering martyrdom in the same year and on the same day as St.
Paul, in the persecution under Nero.
The title "pope" was at one time given to all bishops. It was first adopted to Hyginus in 139 A. D., and in 606 Boniface III induced Phocas, emperor of the East, to confine it to the prelates of Rome. A list compiled from the registers of the Roman church gives names of 264
pontiffs.

TICKLED HIM

"Bronson looks very happy these

"He has reason to be. He says that after his wife and children had been fitted out with their fall wardrobes there was enough left over to enable him to have a new office coat made."

POSSIBLE EXPLANATION.

Aimee—I don't see why Hazel has

Mary—Well, perhaps that's the

TIME SAVING.

"I never waste time contradicting
my wife," said Mr. Meekton.

"Are you always sure she is right?"

"I won't say that. But I am always sure she can convince me that she is."

DOMESTIC DIPLOMACY.

"Why do you insist on having the servant call you at seven o'clock every morning? You never get up at that hour."

"No. But I want to make sure the servant is awake."

NOTHING BUT THE TRUTH.

"After all," remarked the moral-izer, "life is but a journey."

"Yes, and a tiresome journey it is," rejoined the demoralizer, "for when a man reaches the end of it
he's out of breath."

APPROPRIATE DECORATION.

"That old grouch certainly had his living room appropriately decorated."

"How was it done?"

"Mostly in fretwork."

CANDID ANALYSIS.

"Can you dance?"
"Yes," answered the self-appraising man. "I ain't much for style,
but I've got wonderful endurance."

ORNAMENT AND UTILITY.

HIDDEN HOUSE

By CLARISSA MACKIE.

"Remember, Jack, the man has been in prison for twenty years—once he was a great politician, a rich man, respected by all—but he was found out in a big steal. He's done time and now he is out. What is he going to do with the rest of his life? Bring me the story—and you'll get yours, see?" The chief smiled and Jack hustled away to catch the first train for a remote Long Island village, where it was said Roberts was in hiding.

At Sandyways Jack guardedly questioned the host of the solitary hotel. He reasoned that Lawson Roberts would seek sanctuary under an assumed name.

"Many strangers in town?" repeated the hotel man, thoughtfully nibbling a toothpick. "Can't say as there are—all the boarders have gone. I reckon you're an agent of some kind—maybe selling books?"

Jack smiled evasively. "I'll bet there's one old party you couldn't sell a hook to—not if you was to take off 90 per cent of the price," went on the man.

"Who is he?"

"Name's Robinson—taken the old Hidden house—used to be Judge Hidden's place. Celia Hidden married Lawson Roberts, the politician; he's in prison now for crooked dealing. His wife died ten years ago and the place belongs to the daughter. It's never been rented until recently, when Mrs. Lester Bird rented it. No one ever heard of her before; and now her brother, old man Robinson, and his daughter have arrived. And they're all as close-mouthed and upsh as can be; as if Sandyways folks weren't good enough for them. And stingy—wheew!"

"Well, you're not very encouraging," responded Jack with a hored air as he moved away. But when he was out of sight his pace quickened. The first urchin he met directed him to Hidden house on the outskirts of the village.

He approached the side entrance to the gloomy old house, passing a small, rustic summerhouse smothered in woodbine.

"Halt!" said a determined voice. Jack halted to confront a wicked looking shotgun leveled by a sweet-faced, wide-eyed girl hoysishly attired in a short khaki skirt and blouse, with high-laced tan boots on her pretty feet.

His hat came off and his look of inquiry was mingled with sincere admiration.

"Perhaps you didn't observe the 'No Trespassing' signs," she remarked coolly.

"I didn't," he honestly confessed. "They are plainly to be seen," she said significantly. "You can read them as you pass out."

"Thank you—but I want to see some one."

"Who are you looking for?" she asked sharply.

"Mr.—Roberts," he hazarded. Her face paled and a desperate look came into the sweet eyes that should never have been troubled by sorrow.

"You mean Mr. Robinson?" she asked.

"I mean Lawson Roberts," he said, feeling like a brute.

The gun dropped suddenly as if her strength had failed her.

"I might have known it! You want to interview him, I suppose? He has paid the price of his sin—let him alone!" she cried passionately.

"But—my paper—" he stammered, abashed at her emotion.

"Your paper?" she mimicked. "What is it to your paper what my father does now that justice has been satisfied? No one would listen to him when he protested his innocence in those old days." How scornfully she looked at him!

"Hardly that," he said brusquely. He looked sharply down the path. The bent form of a man was hobbling painfully down the walk.

"He is like a child," she said tremulously. "He has been shut away from the world so long, and now everything is strange to him. I will not have him hounded by curiosity seekers! I will kill the first man who tries to interview him!" She ended in a fierce outburst that was strangely unlike her gentle personality.

"I will go, Miss Roberts," he said slowly. "Some day I'm coming back again, not as a reporter to interview your father, but as a friend to help prove his innocence!"

"Ah, thank you—but stay now and hear his story of the guilty man," she cried eagerly.

He shook his head. "I must throw up my present job before I can tackle another one," he smiled and went away.

Afterward, when a great criminal lawyer took up the Roberts case and proved the innocence of the old man, all credit was given to Jack Shirley for his strenuous efforts in the case, and when Jack married Celia Roberts people said he had his great reward.

The editor of the Chronicle muttered maledictions on womankind in general and pretty girls in particular. "I wondered what queerest that Roberts assignment," he frowned. "It was the girl in the case!"

Evil in Suspicion.

To be suspicious is to make oneself the friend and intimate of evil. It is to ally oneself with all the evil forces in the world. Through thinking so much of evil, through being constantly on the watch for it, the suspicious people make observations that are, at times, seemingly amazing in acuteness. But even here they do themselves harm, by gaining more and more confidence in their suspicions, by making themselves more and more enslaved. Their loss may be understood by all of us by reflecting on what they would gain if their minds had taken the direction of good, allying them to all the wholesome forces.

RESOLUTIONS.

Best Resolved in the Hopkinsville Lodge of the Benevolent and Protective Order of Elks, No. 545, that in the death of our brother, Ferdinand Schmid, which occurred in Hopkinsville, Ky., on Thursday, Oct. 14, 1915, that we have suffered truly a great loss. He was a charter member of this lodge and through all of its successes and vicissitudes, he was faithful in everything, unjust in nothing, charitable in many ways.

Resolved further, that we realize, now that he has gone from among us, that his serene and cheerful temperament inspired by love of his kind, will more diffuse through Hopkinsville a sense of reasonableness of friendship, and of kind consideration for the rights of every individual. He had the happy faculty of swift and just decision which promoted and cleared the path of his private business; enabling him to do a world of good for many people outside of his family circle. No one will ever know how many of God's work he befriended.

Resolved further, That we trust that the light of God's countenance may dissipate the gloom and grief of the home where he was wont to dwell. We trust that the great God of us all will give to the remaining members of that family beauty for ashes, the oil of joy for mourning, and the garment of praise for the spirit of heaviness.

Resolved further, That these resolutions be spread upon the minutes of the lodge, and that a copy be furnished the family, and to the press of the city.

Starting the Day Right

THE first exercise of the day at the open air school for the treatment of anemic children in Louisville is a cold shower bath. The bath lasts only a few seconds and is followed by a quick, hard rub with a coarse towel, so that the blood is brought again to the surface. The cold bath hardens any one so that an exposure to cold air and drafts is no longer dangerous. In addition the quick, cold bath sends each child to the school-room happy and alert for the duties of the day.

Why Not Sleep In the Open Air?

ALMOST every one who wishes it may have a sleeping porch. One may be built over the veranda of the home. If this situation is not suitable, two heavy poles and some cleats against the side of a house will support the platform for the bed. If it is not convenient to make over the bedroom window into a door, the bed may be put right close to the window, and you can crawl through the window into the bed.

Fresh air is the most important thing in the treatment of tuberculosis. Consumptives all over the country are building sleeping porches so that they may sleep out of doors.

If fresh air is good for sick people it must also be good for healthy people. Those who have tried sleeping in the open on sleeping porches say they have never rested so well. Those who get up every morning in winter with headaches and feel generally out of sorts will always find that open windows in sleeping rooms will prevent that sort of feeling. Sleeping right out of doors on a porch is even better.

When you build your home plan for an open air sleeping porch just as you would for a kitchen. If you want one now, don't hold back thinking it will cost a large sum of money. This one was built for $20.

Build your porch where it will be protected from strong winds. It is also a good plan to provide it with curtains to keep out the rain and sun.

Help For Consumptives.

The State Tuberculosis Commission, Frankfort, Ky., will send you a physician, health officer or consumer, on request, a free copy of its new booklet on the home care of tuberculosis. This authoritative pamphlet is designed to aid and not supplant the physician. Its chapter on diet will prove especially helpful.

WORLD'S BLOODIEST MONTH

Million Casualties in The Fighting on All The Fronts.

Chicago, Ill., Oct. 25.—In a special cable from Berlin via London to the Evening News Oswald F. Schuchter says:

"The month just passed has been the bloodiest and most decisive in the history of the world. The long promised and terrible French and British offensive which began Sept. 21, is now ended. The result has been that in thirty days the lives in killed and wounded has exceeded the terrifying figure of 1,000,000. There have been thirty days of slaughter on every front."

"Fearful sacrifices netted the British and French only slight gains of land."

"It is possible that the British will be able to make another offensive movement but historians for all time will devote many pages to this red record of this October."

DERELICT WAS CLASSMATE

Judge and Prisoner Spent Time at Different Bars.

Chicago, Oct. 24.—The judge and the prisoner started at each other across the bar in the Desplaines Street Police court.

"University of Wisconsin did you say?" was Judge Labuys surprised inquiry. "What class?" Class of 1907," was the reply of the ragged derelict up for disorderly conduct. His face was scratched and swollen.

"That's my class," said the judge. "What town do you come from?"

"Beaver Dam, Wis. I was reared there."

"My home town," said the judge with a tremor in his voice. "Look at me. It's—it's—I know you now; it's Ed Kelly. You and I were graduated together. Tell me about it Ed."

"Yes," said the prisoner. "It's Kelly. Whisky. That's the story."

"Prisoner discharged," said Judge Labuys brusquely and he slipped a $2 bill into his former college mate's hand. Kelly is said to have been a major league ball player once and to have played with the Boston Americans and the Philadelphia Nationals.

Woman Executed.

Details of the execution of Miss Edith Cavell, an English woman, the head nurse of a surgical school in Brussels, have been sent by U. S. Ambassador Brand Whitlock. Miss Cavell was convicted of aiding English soldiers to escape at 5 o'clock p. m. and was taken from her cell and shot at 2 a. m. She was denied counsel in the alleged trial. She admitted the charge, saying she had reason to believe the soldiers would be shot, and said she was happy to die for her country. A clergyman who saw her at 10 p. m. said she was admirably strong and calm. Ambassador Whitlock spent almost the entire time pleading for mercy or delay, but the German officials at first denied the proposed execution and then refused to spare the woman's life. She had nursed German soldiers as well as English and was devoting her life to humanitarianism.

CHINESE MARK TWAIN

Hopkinsville is to have an unique opportunity when Ng Poon Chew comes in the Hopkinsville Lyceum Course.

Ng Poon Chew, the Chinese journalist, scholar, statesman, and known throughout the United States as the "Chinese Mark Twain," is not a stranger to the American public. On the contrary he has lectured extensively throughout the United States, appearing in all the principal cities before vast audiences.

For many years he has devoted his energies to bringing about a better understanding between the American people and the Chinese. This work he has carried on from the lecture platform and in the columns of his newspaper. He has made impressions upon people that will remain.

Ng Poon Chew has been bountifully endowed by nature with a keen sense of humor. It was his keen wit and his wholesome fun-making that gave him the title "The Chinese Mark Twain." His subjects are substantial and his treatment always serious; but he has the happy faculty of dressing up everything he says in terms of sharp interest. There are many humorous passages in his lectures, with restful effects.

Dr. Ng Poon Chew established the first Chinese daily paper in the United States, and has justly earned the title of "Father of Chinese Journalism in America." He is a many-sided man of deep insight and broad culture. Though of foreign birth and training he gracefully adorns the American platform and is qualified to maintain his place with the best.

HORSES PIGS and CATTLE

CALVES INTENDED FOR BEEF

Necessary to Give Young Animals Grain While on Milk Diet—First Winter of Importance.

When you are feeding calves intended for beef animals you have two methods which may be followed. You can let the calf run with the cow or you can remove the calf and feed him skim milk and grains instead of giving him the whole milk, writes L. Hunt of Kansas in Farm Progress. In these days of dairying the calf that is not weaned is likely to become a skim milk calf. The youngster that runs with his mother usually ends his first summer in excellent flesh, while the skim milk calf is not so plump, but usually has a larger frame.

If you are going to make beef out of either of these calves it is necessary to give them grain while on a milk diet. It is plain that they need this extra ration. In handling the skim milk calf give him a little oil meal while the change from the whole to the skim milk is under way and keep it up as he grows older and bigger. Keep him on the pasture and at the same time keep up the feed of skim milk and oil meal twice daily, and along with this there ought to be some cracked corn, bran and ground oats.

There is not much use in feeding the calf that is running with the cow. If on the pasture he is getting about all that he needs. As a general thing it will pay, though, to teach him to eat, for he will have to go through the weaning period. If fed cracked grains and kept on a good pasture the calf will learn to eat before weaning time and will not lose much flesh when separated from the cow.

The first winter is an important period to the calf that is being grown as a beef animal. The calf will have to be given shelter that is more comfortable than the open sheds that are being provided nowadays for the big steers. The ration ought to be such as to keep up a rapid growth if these calves are to be made into "baby beef." Steers sold somewhere under eighteen months of age are rated as "baby beef."

SPRAYING KEEPS FLIES AWAY

Relief Afforded Live Stock by Mixture of Three Parts Fish Oil and One Part Kerosene.

Relief from attacks by flies may be brought to live stock on the farm by the use of sprays. The following spray is suggested in extensor bulletin No. 43 on "Flies and Their Control," by F. L. Washburn, entomologist of the Minnesota college of agriculture.

Three parts of fish oil and one part kerosene.

The spraying is best done with a knapsack sprayer, and it takes only two or three minutes to spray a steer or horse. The spray appears to keep off all flies for two days.

REMEDY FOR PAWING HORSES

Annoying Habit May Be Cured by Fastening Chain to Animal's Leg—Acts as Chain Switch.

A horse that has the habit of pawing, especially at night, is most annoying. It is also bad for the horse's feet if he is pawing all the time. To stop this, take a strong strap with a buckle on it, also 8 or 10 inches of heavy chain. Put the strap around the horse's leg above the knee so the chain will hang down in front of the knee.

This device acts as a chain switch and will cure the horse of the pawing habit. It also keeps a horse from running in rough pastures—Farm and Fireside.

Sow Becomes Cross.

A brood sow which does not secure sufficient exercise becomes cross and may eat what pigs she does farrow. Improper care and feeding also come in as contributory causes of small

LOVE IN A FOG

By FRANK M. BICKNELL.

Judson Maxwell always gave something to the blind match seller at the corner—for luck, he said. And Barney O'Keefe, that husky, cheery beggar, always wished his honor good and plenty, and then a power more of it atop of that. Maxwell was lucky in being well born, in having his share of good looks, and in being able to spare from his prosperous business enough leisure to follow Prudence Hale across the Atlantic. But he had not yet been lucky enough to persuade her to be his wife.

In the person of Albert Pierce, Maxwell had a formidable rival. As a fair-minded man Maxwell would have freely admitted that Pierce was quite as desirable a match for Prudence as he himself was; but as the young lady had steadily refrained from showing a preference for either suitor the two were now in London for the purpose of further urging their respective suits. All efforts at a viva voce declaration having been adroitly baffled by the still noncommittal fair one, they had finally come to the following gentleman's agreement:

Each was to lay his heart, hand and fortune at Prudence's feet by letter and the two sealed proposals were to be mailed in the same box at the same time, namely, nine o'clock p. m. Monday, November 25.

Now as a matter of fact Miss Prudence was honestly in doubt as to whether she cared more for Maxwell than she did for Pierce. She rather thought—indeed, she felt reasonably sure—she would eventually find her life's happiness in becoming the wife of one of them, but which? Twice, thrice, she re-read each letter and strove heroically with her indecision—quite in vain. By and by, however, as the fog without thickened, there came to her—curiously enough—the glimmering of an idea.

The Hales had taken apartments in Sackville street. Maxwell was staying at a big new hostelry in Northumberland avenue and Pierce at a famous old one in Brook street. It thus happened that the routes the two young men would have to traverse in reaching her from their hotels were about equally long and also about equally devious. In pursuance of her idea—an idea which might or might not lead to satisfactory results—she called up Maxwell on the telephone.

"I have your letter, Jud," she told him, "yours and Bert's. Listen carefully. You will please leave your hotel this afternoon at three o'clock precisely, and start for this house on foot. Walk the entire distance. I shall telephone similar instructions to Bert. You are to find your way to me through the fog, and the one who arrives first—well, I won't promise anything now, but leave that for this afternoon—if you don't both get lost in the fog."

The fog had thickened to a "pea-soup" consistency, and vehicular traffic was practically at a standstill when at 3:27 p. m., the Hale's parlor maid brought Prudence a card, and announced:

"A gentleman to see you, miss."

Prudence drew a long breath and her heart began to beat with rather more than normal rapidity as she took the card and glanced at its inscription. Was she glad or sorry to read the name of Judson Maxwell? Strange though it may seem, she was not yet sure of herself. She was conscious, however, of wondering that he had been able to get to her so soon, through a fog of almost midnight darkness, and also of dimly fancying that his greater love had served him as a guide.

"Prudence!" He appeared at the door evidently in a fever of suspense, then, seeing her alone, he came forward eagerly and took her hands in his. "Prudence," he repeated, "I am first!"

"Yes," she replied, "you are first; and now her unruly heart certainly was thumping at a scandalous rate. Out of the dark fog light seemed suddenly to have broken.

"Are you—aren't you—glad?" he asked breathlessly.

"I—I think—perhaps—I—am," she answered rather haltingly.

"Aren't you sure?" he demanded reproachfully.

Gently she withdrew her hands from his clasp, and raising them, put them about his neck, then shyly drew his face down toward her own, now crimsoning with a color that appeared to him of divine loveliness. She didn't say she was sure, but—she didn't need to.

Pierce came about two hours later—he had gone badly astray in the fog—but he arrived in time to offer his congratulations, and to add, handsomely, that as the best man had won the bride he hoped to be "best man" at the wedding.

"Well, Barney, you brought me the finest kind of luck; you were a friend in need that time if ever there was one."

"Sure, yer honor, 'tis proud an' glad I am I could help ye, though 'twas nothing at all I done worth mention. With me goin' over the route an' right past the young lady's house twice a day, gettin' here an' back ag'in to me own home, 'twas as easy as winkin'."

Yes, Maxwell always gave something to the blind match-seller for luck and long had Barney reason to remember the most profitable match he had ever had anything to do with.

CHIEF ADVANTAGES OF CONCRETE ROADS

Construction of Concrete Road—Sand and Gravel Piled on Subgrade Ready for Use—Subgrade Prepared for Concrete Pavement—Road After Nearly Two Years' Service.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Concrete roads have shown a marked increase in popularity during the past five years, according to the road-building specialists of the U. S. department of agriculture. In 1909 there were 364,000 square yards of such roads in the United States, while for 1914, the amount is estimated at 19,200,000 square yards.

The durability of concrete roads has not been proved by actual practice because there are no very old pavements as yet in existence, but from the condition of those which have undergone several years' service, it seems probable that they will be found to wear well.

The principal advantages of concrete pavements which have led to their increased popularity are:

Durability under ordinary traffic conditions.

A smooth, even surface offering little resistance.

Absence of dust and ease with which it may be cleaned.

Comparatively small cost of maintenance until renewals are necessary.

Availability as a base for another type of surface if desirable.

Attractive appearance.

On the other hand, concrete as a road surface is noisy under horse traffic, and has a tendency to crack. Unless these cracks are cared for at once, they lead to rapid deterioration of the adjacent pavement and finally require difficult repair work.

In the past efforts have frequently been made to overcome these objections to a certain degree by covering the concrete pavement with a bituminous wearing surface. At the present time, the specialists in the department of agriculture hold that this cannot be economically justified, although it is possible that future investigation may change the situation in this respect.

In the present state of road science, however, it seems that where traffic conditions are such that a bituminous surface on a concrete road is practicable, a bituminous surface macadam road would be equally practicable and certainly cheaper.

Where traffic which is too heavy for macadam road uses a bituminous concrete road, the bituminous surface is likely to give way and the uneven manner in which it fails tends to produce excessive wear on portions of the concrete. For a successful concrete road, hardness, toughness, and uniformity are the most essential qualities.

These can be secured to a great extent by care in the selection of the constituent materials and the proportions in which they are mixed. Sample specifications are included in the bulletin, No. 249, Portland Cement Pavements for Country Roads. These specifications are believed to typify the best engineering practice as it has been developed up to this time. They cover such points as materials, grading, subgrade and construction.

The cement, it is said, should always conform to some standard specifications for Portland cement, such as those issued by the United States Bureau of Standards or the American Society for Testing Materials. The sand should not contain more than 5 per cent of foreign material, and sand with more coarse than the grains is to be preferred. The coarse aggregate may consist of either crushed stone or gravel. In either case it is very desirable that the coarse aggregate be well graded in size between proper limits.

The proportion of cement to the sand and coarse aggregate combined should not be less than about 1 to 5, and the proportion of sand to coarse aggregate not less than 1½ to 3, nor greater than 2 to 3. A useful formula when gravel is used as coarse aggregate is 1 part of cement to 1½ parts of sand to 3 parts of gravel. When crushed stone is used, 1½ parts of sand may be substituted in place of 1½ parts.

Ordinarily from 1-3 to ½ of the total cost of constructing a concrete pavement is for labor after the materials are delivered. This emphasizes the importance of efficient organization and proper equipment. Failure to take those factors into consideration frequently results in adding from 10 to 20 per cent to the cost of a concrete pavement.

The most economical method is to have the work of mixing and placing the concrete as nearly continuous as practicable. The work should be planned with a primary view of keeping the mixer going full time. The drainage structures, the grading, and the subgrade should, therefore, be completed well in advance of the mixer and provision made for obtaining all of the necessary materials without delay. A common error is the failure to make adequate provision for delivering water on the work, and the amount which a given stream is capable of supplying is frequently overestimated.

ENSILING THE GREEN CROPS

Extensive Investigation Carried on by Nebraska Experiment Station—Six Small Silos Used.

The department of agricultural chemistry of the experiment station and college of agriculture of Nebraska has been carrying on an extensive investigation during the last year on the chemistry of the processes which take place during the ensiling of various green crops. Special attention has been given to silage made from mixtures of alfalfa and sweet sorghum.

Six small silos holding about one ton each were filled in September, 1914, with various mixtures. Two of these silos were opened during the second week of August, 1915, and the silage in each was found to be in perfect condition. The first silo contained a mixture of one part sweet sorghum and one part alfalfa, while the second contained a mixture of one part sweet sorghum and two parts alfalfa.

Alfalfa alone will not make silage, because the plant does not contain enough sugar to insure the production of sufficient acid to preserve the silage. The acid produced from the sugar in the green plant by bacterial action preserves the silage. By mixing sweet sorghum with the alfalfa the necessary sugar is supplied.

Weaning Time.

Weaning time is from six to twelve weeks. If the sows are to be rebred at once, the pigs should be weaned at eight or nine weeks of age. If one litter per year only is planned, the pigs may be allowed to run with the sow until twelve or fourteen weeks of age.

HIS BIG STORY

By JANE OSBORN.

"Get a good story at any cost," the city editor had told Tom Ordway, crack reporter on the Morning Star, when he sent him out to "cover" the Morris-Norris wedding. "Get away from the stereotyped society dope. The Morris are always doing something sensational and the Norrises have controlling ownership in the tin trust that we have been fighting. Go as far as you like; don't hesitate to offend any one, but at any cost get a first page story."

A half hour later Tom was part of the gay assemblage of the city's richest and most exclusive set that had gathered at the palatial Morris residence to witness the most elaborately planned wedding of the season.

During the strains of the wedding march Tom watched intently. He had the names of the bridesmaids beforehand and there was nothing in their conventional prettiness and studied gait to attract his attention. But with the approach of the maid of honor—the famous society belle, Doris Dabney, who seemed to advance like a goddess in an aura of blues and mauve—Tom shared in the general wave of admiration.

Tom looked closely, studying the beautiful features of the young woman as she passed near him to the tower of roses set up at one end of the Morris ballroom. He paused, almost staggering with the impression that suddenly came to him.

"It's Jane," he said half aloud, and as the strains of the wedding march continued and the Morris pedigree and the Norris millions were united in that famous marriage Tom stood as one in a daze. How had Jane Lane, the girl he had loved in his boyhood, whom he had not seen for five years, to be sure, but whom, in his heart of hearts, he loved still—how had this country girl been transported to this scene of wealth and elegance? She had been as poor as he in the days when they went to school together, and there she was, dazzling in a gown that must have cost more than he earned in three months and wearing jewels worth a king's ransom.

What of Doris Dabney, the society beauty who had been expected to act as maid of honor? Could Jane be Doris? Was he dreaming?

The story. It was as good as written. Every one had expected Doris Dabney to act as maid of honor. Doris resembled Jane amazingly, for no one apparently realized that Doris had not appeared. He would talk to Jane and get the whole story.

When Tom had made his way to Jane he noticed that she seemed intent on avoiding conversation. But he was insistent, and "Jane" uttered in a whisper banished her reserve. Tom rushed from expressions of joy at seeing her to a volley of questions, and Jane enthusiastically told him the whole secret. She was serving as governess in the Morris family. Her resemblance to Doris Dabney had often been remarked.

Then the very day of the wedding Doris Dabney disappeared. It was a scandal, of course. She had eloped with her father's good-looking Danish chauffeur. If the news leaked out it would spoil everything. So Jane had been called to the rescue to play the part of Doris, to wear her gown and to appear with the priceless Dabney pearls and sapphires for the wedding.

Tom's elation was divided between delight at having found Jane and joy at having found his "big story." He was hurrying away when Jane, following him, put a hand on his arm.

"How did you happen to be here?" she asked. "You don't travel in the Morris set. Tell me, Tom—there was anxious appeal in her voice—"are you still with the Morning Star?"

Then Tom, now more intent on his story than on his revived love for Jane, and Jane, herself afraid of being discovered, departed hurriedly as some guests came toward them.

It was nearly midnight, and Tom was pounding the keys of his typewriter in the stifling atmosphere of the city room of the Morning Star. He was just hammering out the last paragraph of his "big story," a real "scoop" for the Morning Star, for none of the other papers could possibly have got wind of the scandalous elopement of the beautiful Doris.

Tom felt a pressure on his arm and a sweet voice at his side. It was Jane, Jane shorn of her jewels and with a simple street suit in place of Doris' finery.

"Is it too late?" she asked breathlessly. "I came as soon as I could. I know when I ask you that you won't make use of the story I gave you. I told you because you are a friend."

Ten minutes later, Tom's story of the Morris-Norris nuptials, shorn of all its sensation, having gone to press, Tom and Jane left the office of the Morning Star. It was in a deserted surface car that led to the Morris home that Jane pressed Tom's hand to thank him for what he had done.

"It was hard," admitted Tom, "and I wouldn't have done it for anyone else in the world. But I've always loved you, Jane, and for you I would give up the biggest story I ever trapped down. And now I've found you, little Jane, I am not going to let you go."

And something in Jane's smile assured Tom that he had not made his sacrifice in vain.

BREEDING HENS FOR LAYERS

Bringing Up a Laying Strain Requires Much Patience and Worry of Several Kinds.

In breeding for layers you will start with, we will say, a dozen hens, and they should be of a laying breed and purebred if you would make a success of it. You trap-nest these and must keep the record closely for that season, and even if purebred and you are breeding for a 150-egg record for the year, you may possibly come out with three or four only of the twelve that come up to the number of eggs wanted, and unless you have marked the eggs from each one of the trapped hens you are likely to not know one chick hatched from these hens that are to form the start for the laying strain, but if you do know the chicks from these hens' eggs—a difficult matter—then you will have a larger number to start with in next year's trial.

You start in next year with your four hens and any of their progeny you know to put with them. Now, whether there were but four hens or more, for not all start with as low as a dozen, some of these hens will not come up to the record in the second year, and will not do to carry further, and so must be sent back to the general flock, or sold. And thus the man or woman who builds a strain goes on year after year working to get a flock that will come up to the number of eggs a year he has set for it to produce and bring forth progeny dependable in the same line. Bring up a laying strain means much work and worry of several kinds.

HINTS FOR FEEDING POULTRY

Young Chickens and Poultry Relish Onions Chopped Fine—Milk Is Excellent for Fowls.

(By W. R. GILBERT.)

Young onions chopped fine is a first rate diet for young chickens and turkey poults. When possible, a little should be shredded in all the meals until the birds are six weeks old.

Milk spreads itself over all the good feeding qualities, but like turnips and potatoes, it has a very high percentage of water and a low one of organic matter. However, it is the best digestive of all the foods and the best for alling fowls.

I have come to the conclusion, after a fairly long experience, that there is no grain so profitable for night feeding as corn (whole). It keeps the crop full and the heat of the body up during the long winter better than other foods. If it is crushed it is digested too fast.

TO DESTROY LICE ON FOWLS

Several Kinds of Powder Manufactured for Purpose—Whitewash Inside of Poultry House.

There are several kinds of good powders manufactured and sold to kill the lice in the plumage of fowls.

The fowl to be treated should be held by the shanks, with its head down and the powder worked into its plumage with the fingers until the plumage is full of it. If applied when the fowls are on the roost and they are carefully put back after being dusted, the powder will be more effective.

To get rid of the little mites, all the roosts and nearby woodwork should be frequently dusted with lice-killing powder. The inside of the house should be cleaned and whitewashed.

The fowls should be dusted with the powder several times during the summer season.

Keep on Culling Out.

Continue the selection and culling out processes with the early pullets, so that none but the very best of the fowls will go into the laying houses. It is often the case that pullets which at three months old looked to be first class will at five months look like entirely different fowls.

Pullets for Layers.

The best-looking pullets should be selected for layers at once, the undesirable ones being sold early, while the price is high.

Field Mice—A, Meadow Mouse; B, Pine Mouse.

(Prepared by the United States Department of Agriculture.)

Field mice, under certain conditions, may become extraordinarily abundant, and, as they are injurious to most crops, methods for controlling them are of importance. Unfortunately most of their natural enemies are being destroyed or driven away from the farms, so that these mice are becoming more and more of a serious pest.

Altogether there are some fifty species of field mice known to exist in the United States, but for the farmer who is concerned only with getting rid of them there are only two classes—meadow mice and pine mice. The runs of meadow mice are mainly on the surface of the ground, under grass or some sheltering litter. These runs lead to shallow burrows which serve as winter homes. In summer the mice use surface nests of dead grass. The young may be brought forth in either.

Meadow mice destroy grass, cut down grain, clover and alfalfa, eat grain left standing in shocks, injure flowers and vegetables—in short, do harm in a hundred ways. In the lower Humboldt valley in Nevada in 1907-1908 they totally ruined 18,000 acres of alfalfa. Trees and shrubbery are also attacked and large nurseries of young apple trees have been known to have been almost wholly destroyed by the mice cutting through the bark at or below the surface of the ground.

When the mice completely girdle a shrub or young tree and eat through the inner layer of the bark, the action of the sun and wind soon complete the destruction of the tree or shrub. If the injury is not too extensive, prompt covering of the wounds will usually save the tree. In any case of girdling, heaping up fresh soil about the trunk so as to cover the wounds and prevent evaporation is recommended as the simplest remedy. To save large, valuable trees, however, bridge grafting is often resorted to.

Pine mice ordinarily live in the woods and are not, therefore, found on the open plains, though they like land that is not frequently cultivated. They tunnel their way from fence rows, hedges and woods into gardens and cultivated fields, where they live on seeds, roots and leaves. Like meadow mice, they also destroy fruit trees, particularly in upland orchards. They attack the trees below the surface, so that their work is frequently not revealed until the tree is dead.

Means of Extermination.

When the mice, both meadow and pine, are in small numbers, trapping is probably the easiest method of getting rid of them. From 12 to 20 traps to an acre may often be set with advantage in the mouse runs. Where the mice are abundant or the areas large, poisoning is a quicker means of extermination. The following formulas are recommended in Farmers' Bulletin 510 of the United States department of agriculture:

Dry Grain Formula.

Mix thoroughly one ounce powdered strychnine (alkaloid), one ounce powdered bicarbonate of soda and one-eighth ounce (or less) of saccharine. Put the mixture in a tin pepper box and sift it gradually over 50 pounds of crushed wheat or 40 pounds of crushed oats in a metal tub, mixing the grain constantly so that the poison will be evenly distributed.

Dry mixing, as above described, has the advantage that the grain may be kept any length of time without fermentation. If it is desired to moisten the grain to facilitate thorough mixing, it would be well to use a thin starch paste (as described below, but without strychnine) before applying the poison. The starch soon hardens and fermentation is not likely to follow. If crushed oats or wheat cannot be obtained, whole oats may be used, but they should be of good quality. As mice hull the oats before eating them, it is desirable to have the poison penetrate the kernels. A very thin starch paste is recommended as a medium for applying poison to the grain. Prepare as follows:

Wet Grain Formula.

Dissolve one ounce of strychnine sulphate in two quarts of boiling water. Dissolve two tablespoonfuls of laundry starch in one-half pint of cold water. Add the starch to the strychnine solution and boil for a few minutes until the starch is clear. A little saccharine may be added if desired, but it is not essential. Pour the hot starch over one bushel of oats in a metal tub and stir thoroughly. Let the grain stand overnight to absorb the poison.

Distributing Poisoned Grain.

The poisoned grain prepared by either of the above formulas is to be distributed over the infested area, not more than a teaspoonful at a place, care being taken to put it in mouse runs and at the entrances of burrows. Small drain tiles, 1½ inches in diameter, have sometimes been used to advantage to hold poisoned grain, but old tin cans with the edges bent nearly together will serve the same purpose.

Field mice may also be driven away by thorough cultivation of fields and the elimination of fence rows. In the case of trees, clean tillage and the removal from the neighborhood of weeds and grass will prove an effective precaution.

Finally, the farmer should remember that there are many animals, birds and snakes around the farm which do little or no harm, and are most useful in keeping down the numbers of field mice. Among these owls deserve special notice. Mice are the chief diet both of the short-eared and the barn owl. The common screech owl destroys English sparrows as well as mice. It stays close to orchards and farm buildings and is, therefore, a useful assistant.

TREATMENT FOR HOG VERMIN

Wise to Have Dipping Tank and Use it on All Stock, Whether They Need it or Not.

Lice on hogs are treated: By getting the animal in a corner and scrubbing him with an old broom dipped in crude oil.

By pouring kerosene on his back with a can (this kills the lice and often pretty near kills the porker).

By hanging a blanket saturated with crude oil in a gap through which the hogs must pass, thus oiling them automatically.

By setting up a manufactured device which gives the animals an elided surface against which to rub.

By providing a hog wallow, in which the hogs can roll in mud and oil.

By dipping them in a dipping tank filled with a preparation acid for the purpose.

You may choose to let the pigs and the lice fight it out. In this case, you may be sure, the hogs will get the worst of it. The stock farm on which wisdom reigns has a dipping tank in which all the stock are dipped "whether they need it or not."

Most Poisonous Weeds.

Wild garlic or water hemlock is one of the most deadly poisonous plants that grow in the fields or open range country.

EARLY CORN BEST FOR SEED GUARDS PROTECT THE BIRDS

More Apt to Be Well Cured Before Hard Freezes—Irrregular Kernels Should Always Be Rejected.

After the seed corn is husked, it should be dried before hard freezes, though early corn is apt to be well cured in the shock. If the shock has stood up well no seed should be saved from down shocks, even when the ears look good on the outside. The germ is next the cob. We have learned from experience that grains with dark points may sprout in the tester, but they send up weak sprouts and are not reliable.

A simple way of drying and storing seed corn for home use is to fill coarse burlap sacks and suspend them in the barn by a single wire. Mice will sometimes descend a double wire and take the germs from your best kernels. Of course, corn should not be sacked when at all damp and less than a bushel should not be placed in a sack, says a writer in an exchange. This method would seem tedious to seed corn growers, no doubt, but it will be of use to many small farmers.

The final selection of corn for seed should be made next spring when the sacks of ears are opened and the ears shelled. Some defects will likely appear then which were not noticed this fall. Irregular kernels should then be rejected as they may lodge in the planter and cause a poor stand. For this reason tips and butts should be rejected and all doubtful ears should be tested.

FEAR INSPIRED BY BALLOON

More Than a Century Ago Great Britain Dreaded Visit of "Warship of the Air."

One hundred and thirty-one years ago the balloon, a French invention of that time, gave an unpleasant feeling of insecurity to England, which, however, has had to wait for actual overhead invasion until the Zeppelin, the air-monster of today, appeared. The fear was even then entertained that this French invention might be used by the natural enemies of the British race. A British caricature is mentioned in Chambers' Book of Days as having been published in 1784, entitled "Montgolfier in the Clouds, Constructing Air-Balloons for the Grand Monarque." The grand monarque was then not Louis XIV, but Louis XVI. In this the French inventor is represented blowing soap bubbles and saying: "Oh, by Gar, dis be de grand invention. Dis will immortalize my king, my country, myself. We will declare the war against our enemies. We will make des English wake, by Gar. We will inspect their camp, we will intercept their fleet, we will set fire to their dockyards, and by Gar, we will take Gibraltar in de air-balloon; and when we have conquer de English, den we conquer de other countries, and make them all colonie to de Grand Monarque."

WEST SUFFERS FROM WAR

Little Children Excite the Sympathy of Those Who Know the Situation in France.

Of all those who suffer by the war none make a more immediate appeal to the sympathies than the little children left alone in the world.

The Committee Franco-American for the Protection of the Children of the Frontier has already done noble work, under the direction of Mrs. Bliss, wife of the secretary of the American embassy at Paris, and Mr. A. F. Jacacci, the artist-author, whose "On the Trail of Don Quixote" is well remembered. The treasurer is Frederic R. Coudert.

One hundred and twenty-five children, little ones like those who were rescued from the region of Belfort, have been saved from parts of Alsace recently conquered by French troops, Ypres and other Flemish towns devastated by months of artillery fire.

Shelter has been found for them in convents and institutions that are providing a roof, but are so sadly impoverished that the children must go unfed unless food can be secured through others. The little ones are living on 15 cents a day.

ESTHETICISM.

"I never see the smoke pouring from a steamer's funnels that I don't think of the poor devils below shoveling coal into the furnaces," remarked the sympathetic man.

"Oh," replied the giddy young thing, "but just think of the picturesque smudge it makes on the sky line."

NO USE FOR IT.

Barber—Can't I sell you a bottle of this tonic, sir? It will positively prevent the hair from coming out.

Customer—No, thank you. You see, I'm a married man and the easier my hair comes out the less it hurts.

AN INSINUATION.

"I wonder if angels ever smoke?" remarked Meerschaum, as he filled and lighted his trusty pipe.

"I think not," replied his better half, "but, according to the Good Book, the other fellows do."

DISPLACING MEN.

"Here's a fellow patents a contrivance to keep girls from falling out of hammocks."

"More machinery for displacing men."

SAFE ENOUGH.

"I always assess my customers at their face value."

"What is your business?"

"I'm a beauty doctor."

LITERALLY SO.

"Did your interview with her, father make you angry?"

"I must say I was very much put out."

ITS STYLE.

"This author murders the king's English."

"They say he is perfectly killing."

RADIUM FROM SEA WATER

Professor of University of Alabama Believes Radium May Be Obtained From the Ocean.

Prof. Stewart J. Lloyd of the University of Alabama has recently published the results of an examination of a sample of water obtained in the Gulf of Mexico, about two hundred miles south of Mobile, and has given in this connection a resume of the results obtained by other investigators in measuring the radium content of sea water. The results explain that the growing recognition of radium as an important factor in geological processes has led to many analyses of rocks, soils, springs and river waters for that element, while our greatest reservoir of radium, the ocean, has received but little attention. Joly, who examined samples from several oceans and seas, obtained a value for the radium content so high that it cannot be reconciled with the values obtained by Eve and Satterly for the North Atlantic, and Lloyd for the Gulf of Mexico. Excluding Joly's results, the author finds the average to be 1.2×10^{-12} gram of radium per liter of sea water, which would make the total radium content of the ocean about 1,400 tons.—Scientific American.

CRUISERS OF THE NAVIES

Not Altogether Easy to Understand Why the Name Should Have Been Given Them.

It is certainly strange that one particular class of ship should have been singled out for the title of "cruisers," more especially as the great majority of them have a much smaller cruising capacity than the majority of battleships. Our first ships to which the word was applied (the admiralty then spelt it with a "z") were the picturesque vessels of the old Amphion class, launched in 1883, and shortly after a clean sweep was made of the term "corvette." In the steam era the word cruiser has become associated more particularly with speed, though there is no apparent connection. Many cruisers now doing useful work are, too, considerably slower than modern battleships, while the 25-knot Queen Elizabeths are nominally as fast as and probably, in practice, faster than the battle cruisers of the invincible group. These "15-inch battleships" ought really to be grouped with the battle cruisers, with which they have several points in common.—London Globe.

THAT'S DIFFERENT.

BELGIAN WOMEN

SENT TO PRISON

Because They Refuse to Do
Military Work For Germans,

Paris, Oct. 23.—A correspondent of the Havas News Agency, telegraphing from Hazebrouck, said that the town of Harlebeke, Belgium, near Courtrai, is being punished by the German Governor because the women of that locality refuse to do military work for the Germans. Twenty-nine women, he says, have been sent to Germany as prisoners.

"The Belgian food committee has been forbidden to supply Harlebeke with food," the dispatch adds. "All cafes are closed. No Belgian is allowed to go out of doors between 4 p. m. and 7 a. m."

"The town of Lessines has been compelled to pay a heavy fine because the women there declined to work for the German army."

A SIMPLE SLEEPING PORCH

WHEN you build your new home plan to have a sleeping porch. If you do not like hot summer nights and stuffy winter nights indoors, build a sleeping porch like the one above on your present home. Place it in an angle so as to avoid drafts. The southeast or southwest side of the house is best. The sides should be boarded up three or four feet to insure privacy and a reasonable freedom from drafts. The upper part should be covered with wire netting. Outside the netting hang canvas strips that can be raised or lowered from the inside.

A porch of this sort can be made for from $50 to $100, depending on the kind of finish and material used.

BLESSINGS ABUNDANT SAYS THANKSGIVING PROCLAMATION.

Washington, Oct. 21.—President Wilson in a proclamation designating Thursday, November 25, as Thanksgiving day, called attention to the fact that the United States has been at peace while most of Europe has been at war.

"We have been able to assert our rights and the rights of mankind without breach of friendship with the great nations with whom we have had to deal," said the President. The text follows:

THE PROCLAMATION.

"It has long been the honored custom of our people to turn in the fruitful autumn of the year in praise and thanksgiving to Almighty God for His many blessings and mercies to us as a nation. The year that is now drawing to a close since we last observed our day of national thanksgiving has been, while a year of discipline because of the mighty forces of war and of changes which have disturbed the world, also a year of special blessing for us.

"Another year of peace has been vouchsafed us; another year in which not only to take thought of our duty to ourselves and to mankind, but also to adjust ourselves to the many responsibilities thrust upon us by a war which has involved almost the whole of Europe.

"We have been able to assert our rights and the rights of mankind without breach of friendship with the great nations with whom we have had to deal, and while we have asserted rights, we have been able also to perform duties and exercise privileges of succor and helpfulness which should serve to demonstrate our desire to make the offices of friendship the means of truly disinterested and unselfish service.

OUR SERVICE EXTENDED.

"Our ability to serve all who could avail themselves of our services in the midst of crises has been increased, by a gracious Providence, by more and more abundant crops; our ample financial resources have enabled us to steady the markets of the world and facilitate necessary movement of commerce which the war might otherwise have rendered impossible; and our people have come more and more to a sober realization of the part they have been called upon to play in a time when all the world is shaken by unparalleled distresses and disasters.

"The extraordinary circumstances of such a time have done much to quicken our national conscientiousness and deepen and confirm our confidence in the principles of peace and freedom by which we have always sought to be guided. Out of darkness and perplexities have come firmer counsels of policy and clearer perceptions of the essential welfare of the nation. We have prospered while other peoples were at war, but our prosperity has been vouchsafed us, we believe, that we might the better perform the functions which war rendered impossible for them to perform.

SHOULD RENDER THANKS.

"Now, therefore, I, Woodrow Wilson, President of the United States of America, do hereby designate Thursday, the 25th of November next, as a day of thanksgiving and prayer, and invite the people throughout the land to cease from their wonted occupations and in their several homes and places of worship render thanks to Almighty God.

"In witness whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused the seal of the United States to be affixed.

"Done at the City of Washington this 20th day of October, in the year of our Lord One Thousand, Nine Hundred and Fifteen, and of the Independence of the United States of America the One Hundred and Fortieth.

"By the President:

"ROBERT LANSING,

"Secretary of State."

"WOODROW WILSON."
